JAPANESE CANCELLATIONS

Bisected Circle Types

(Maru-Ichi)

Type 4

Around 1890 the Japanese Postal Service changed their postal cancellation from a double to a single circle bisected horizontally. These lasted in use until 1909 in some offices, primarily for canceling stamps used for payment of telephone and telegraph fees. The two lines of inscription above the bar give the name (and usually the province) of the office. Below the bar, the first line gives the year and the month, reading from right to left, and the second line gives the day. In this particular cancel there is no indication of its usage as other types of this period do.

This type (4), was also used as a postmark on mail but only in small offices and only in the early years of period 1890-1909; in fact in offices so small that they only had one mail dispatch a day. Also, it was used in certain categories of small subordinate post offices (yubin uketorisho). It was also used from 1905-1909 on registered and other special handling mail.

COMB CANCELS

These are "star variants" of other comb types. Their common element is the star in D or E, which has been said in Japan to signify a mu-shuhai kyoku (an office that neither collects nor delivers mail). Generally this holds true but a few cases have been found from large city post offices. These cancels were for non-postal usuage such as money orders or telephone receipts since all communications services were under governmental control.

Postal Cancel

These are found chiefly on this Chrysanthemum Series stamps, but also on late-use examples of the New Koban Series. This was used in the home islands only in a few of the largest cities from 1901; postal types were discontinued in 1905, but many non-postal examples dated into 1909 can be found

Non-postal usuage

All the comb type cancels from Taiwan had horizontal rather than vertical lines in D and E unless one or both of those spaces had to be used for an inscription, as in certain maritime and railways postmarks from the island. The only other Japanese territory ever to use the horizontal lines in D and E was Hong Kong during the 1942-1945 occupation, and the Hong Kong markings always had 3 stars in C, unlike those of Taiwan. The Hong Kong 3 star markings were used postally.
